distancing, hygiene, hazard assessment, workplace controls, and other health and safety issues. This new OSHA guidance supplements previous guidance released by OSHA in March 2020.

- Reduction of Property Tax in Light of the COVID-19 Pandemic

Tax Attorney Maria Kamila Pineda published an article calling for a reduction in property taxes in light of the effects of the COVID-19 pandemic. Typically, these taxes are calculated based on the value of a property on January 1. However, many property values have dramatically decreased since the onset of the pandemic. In her article, Ms. Pineda explains why a reduction is necessary and what legal steps should be taken to implement it.

- OMB Extends Relief for Federal Grant Recipients Impacted by COVID-19

The U.S. Office of Management and Budget (OMB) released M-20-26, Extension of Administrative Relief for Recipients and Applicants of Federal Financial Assistance Directly Impacted by the Novel Coronavirus (COVID-19) due to Loss of Operations — the fourth in a series of OMB memoranda. The recently issued additional guidance is designed to allow federal grant recipients: 1) to charge employee costs to federal awards for additional work related to COVID-19 interruptions or 2) to delay their single audit submission by up to six months. The memorandum extends two of the short-term administrative relief flexibilities previously provided under M-20-17, the second OMB memorandum related to federal financial assistance, and also imposes a requirement for recipients and subrecipients with regard to the Schedules of Expenditures.

- OCC Identifies Key Risks and Supervisory Expectations for Banks in the COVID-19 Environment

The Office of the Comptroller of the Currency (OCC) has issued its Semiannual Risk Perspective (Report), which sets forth the OCC's views on the economy, as well as key supervisory and compliance risks that the nation's top banking regulator has identified for heightened concern by its regulated institutions. The majority of the Report provides a review and analysis of the substantial downturn in the U.S. economy due to the COVID-19 pandemic, and the OCC appears to expect that the operational and credit challenges that have surfaced will continue into the remainder of 2020. Given the OCC's observations and guidance set forth in the Report, banks should expect increased examiner scrutiny over risk management and internal audit functions to ensure that existing policies and procedures are still being followed, and that any adjustments to a bank's operations to allow for pandemic-related flexibility do not ignore risk. In addition to other compliance areas, the OCC is particularly focused on the cybersecurity, data integrity

- Navigating Artificial Intelligence and Consumer Protection Laws in Wake of the COVID-19 Pandemic

Attorneys Kwamina Thomas Williford, Anthony DiResta and Esther Clovis co-authored an article analyzing a statement from the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) reaffirming that consumer protection laws, traditionally applied to human activities or decision-making technologies, equally apply to artificial intelligence (AI). The article breaks down the statement, addressing topics including Section 5 of the FTC Act's prohibition against unfair and deceptive acts, equal protection laws, and laws affecting consumer access to credit, employment and insurance. The authors also discuss key principles for managing consumer protection risks presented by AI.

- Creating Certainty in Uncertain Times

Senior Counsel Heidi Nadel wrote an article published by Family Business United offering guidance for family businesses during the coronavirus pandemic. The article includes five tips focused on forging a path forward while establishing some certainty for businesses and their employees. She emphasizes the importance of maintaining employees' health and safety, discusses ways to reinvent and/or adapt one's business, and outlines potential sources of financial relief, among other topics.
